Certificate of Advanced Studies Inhouse Counsel

10 ECTS Credits

The course provides present and future in-house counsels with an introduction to relevant areas of the working methods of people working in the position of in-house counsel. This includes in particular areas such as legal strategy, compliance, risk management, corporate governance, contract drafting, litigation and dispute management and other important areas of law. In addition, participants will acquire knowledge and skills in the areas of personnel and leader effectiveness, project management, people management, etc., which are necessary for successful in-house counsel. The program combines academic teaching and research with practice and at the same time promotes professional, methodological and social skills.

This program is organized and run by Europa Institut at the University of Zurich on behalf of the Faculty of Law of the University of Zurich.

Aim of the course

The program is a part-time university course with the aim of providing current and future in-house counsels with an introduction to relevant areas and the working methods of people in the role of a corporate lawyer, tailored to their function. In particular, this includes topics such as legal strategy, compliance, risk management, corporate governance, M&A, contract drafting, litigation and dispute management. In addition, participants are taught knowledge and skills in the areas of personal and leader effectiveness.

Target group

This course is recommended to lawyers who are already working as in-house counsel in a company or who would like to prepare for a move to the legal department or legal service of a company. The CAS Inhouse Counsel is also of interest to professionals who want to better understand the challenges faced by an in-house counsel and be able to advise them more efficiently.
